ROBESPIERRE ON TOLEBATION.

(Pall Mc Gasette, April 19.) To speak of Hobespierre as a teacher of morals may sound incongruous to these who associate his name with little besides the guillotine and the long procession of victims be sent to death. Many a better man, however, has failed to grasp the truth he preached in '93, when churches were robbed and priests imprisoned, as is now the case in Paris. A French paper calls the attention of the authorities of the present excesses to his attenuces of this point "By what right (said he) should men hitherto unknown in the march of revolution come in the midst of these events to seek a false popularity, sowing discord among us, disturbing liberty of worship in the name of liberty, attacking fanatioism by fresh fanaticism, and making the homage due to pure truth they be permitted thus to play with the dignity of the people, and fasten the bells of felly to the very sceptre of reason? It has been supposed that by receiving civic offerings the Convention had proscribed Catholic worship. No, stbe Convention has not taken this rash stop; it never will do so. Its intention is to maintain the liberty of worship which it has proclaimed, and at the same time to represe those who abuse it to the disturbance of public order. Priests have been denounced for having said mass; they will say it longer if they are prevented from saying it. He who tries to prevent make from being said is more fanatical than he who says it. TNOR scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words ounce RAVINS DUCK, suitable for Boat Sails which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond n the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, schieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast mergins and vacant-spaces which have heretofore obstructorized Chizese publications. THE Proprietor of Wing-KEB Shop begs to The scope of the work is so great, and its inform the Public that his Shop has been established since 1855, at Endicott's Long, and utilitarian purposes so complete, that a rethat he has always a great quantity of Best ference to its pages enables a person who COAL in store for Sale. Gentlemen or Ship understands English to communicate effectively masters wishing to patronise him, are requested with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. Extracts.

An Evil of City Life. In former days the City merchant lived in a counting house. He was at his deak early in against Fire on Buildings and Goods, at current the morning, and was still to be found there rates. till eight or nine o'clook at night. But his hours of business were long because when at business he was also at home. If he was liable to be occasionally summoned from the dinnertable to confer with a customer, on the other hand he could often close his books and step upstairs for a gossip with a friend. He was on the spot if anybody wanted him; and whether he sat in his counting-house or in his arm chair, by the fire in his private parlour mattered little. The most important part of his business would usually be over not long after noon, and then came dinner -a substantial and serious meal." served probably at a common table, where he sat surrounded by his clerks and apprentices. as well as by his family. The afternoon would pass dozily, and towards evening the mercantile community would rouse itself up for a little more work before supper and bedtime. The of its yearly profits, divided pro rata to the net premium contributed. nort of life led by City people of the last generation is exactly that which may be seen at the present day in many towns of Germany and Holland, where a brisk forenoon is followed by an entire cessation of business during the solemn interval of dinner; after which offices and warehouses are again opened till late at night. Though the day's work is apparently long, it is taken very leisurely and easily. The domestic and the business life blend naturally together, and the transition can always be accommodated to cannal circumstances. No time is lost in travelling, and the pressure is avoided of having to do everything and think of everything within a fixed fraction of the day, and of attempting to carry on a kind of double existence in separate and distant places. Afterwards, when merchants gave | Insurances, viz:-up living in the City, they retired only to a moderate distance from it, and were still content to adhere to the long hours which left them plenty of time for their work. It has come to be a familiar saying that it is Above 3 months and not lead of the work but worry which weers a man down: exceeding 6 months. not work but worry which wears a man down: But worry, we take it is, only another word for mental effort and anxiety, and this is of course inscrarable in some degree from all serious work of any kind. It may however be increased very much by the minner in which a man applies himself to his labour; and it is impossible to conceive anyone placing himself at a greater dieadvantage in this respect than the ordinary man of business in the City. .. It is positively pitiable to observe the innumerable artificial and needless worries with which he wilfully and wantonly surrounds himself. In the first place, he usually lives at some distance from town. He has a railway journey of an hour or more before be reaches his office, and if he misses a particular train he is probably doomed to kick his beels at home for another. hour, and waste the most precious period of the day. Anxiety about the train oppresses him at breakfast. He bolts his chop and gulps his tea with one eye on the clock and the other on l the morning paper, his mind distracted be-tween his wife's gossip and commissions and his own reflections on the possible influence of the telegrams on the state of the days' markets. A railway journey is not exactly the most pared to take risks against Fire, on the usual favourable specific to assist the digestion terms. of a meal thus swallowed. In the natural course of i things, while some transactions have been successful, others have turned out badly. There are difficult questions to be solved, calculations to be recast, and losses to be recouped. The room in which our man of business is sitting i in all probability a small, dingy chamber, the darkness of which is rendered visible by the borrowed light of a patent reflector, assisted perhaps by a jet of gas. A great deal has been done of late years to improve the architecture of the City, both in respect of embellishment and sanitary conditions. Not a few of the greathouses have followed the example of the insurance offices and public companies, and established themselves in noble mansions, with marble bails and apacious well-ventilated rooms. But it is no exaggeration to say that the great bulk of the ordinary lusiness of the City is still conducted in gloomy cupboards of the kind we have Insurances, viz: described. Ville continue a goblet of sherry containing twice or thrice as much spirit without the qualification of water. Something may be due to the habitual ignorance and thoughtleseness even of well informed people as to the elements of what they eat and drink, but it is impossible not to enspect that the presence of strong spirit in wherry is not altogether a disagreeable or unknown adulteration, and that there is a tacit collusion on this point between the wine-merchant and | tice, viz:-
